Mum Come on, just for an hour.
Sophie Oh alright. Where are we going?
Mum Well, first to the butcher’s for some hamburgers and some sausages.
Sophie The butcher’s? Where’s that?
Mum It’s next to your favourite bookshop. Then the greengrocer’s, for, let me see, bananas, carrots, apples and… er, oh yes, mushrooms.
Sophie The greengrocer’s?
Mum Yes. It’s opposite the butcher’s. After that the grocer’s for milk and pasta. And then the newsagent’s for a newspaper.
Sophie Mum… why are we going to these shops? We usually go to the supermarket. It’s nearer, and it’s quicker.
Mum I know, and it’s cheaper. But the food is better in the local shops.
Sophie Can we go to the shoe shop then? It’s near the bookshop.

Ann Sorry, Ben, I can't. I have to tidy my bedroom.
Ben Oh no! I never have to tidy my bedroom. My mum usually does it.
Ann That's terrible! You're lazy. Do you make your bed?
Ben Yes, I have to make my bed, and my sister and I have to do the washing-up on Saturdays.
Ann Oh, I don't have to do the washing-up. We've got a dishwasher. We sometimes have to load it. Do you have to do the cooking with your mum? I don't have to, but I like doing it.
Ben My mum says I mustn't do the cooking. I'm a disaster in the kitchen!
Ann Well, time to go. I have to finish my homework before I go to bed.

FILM 1 Jane Austen

Jane Austen is one of Britain’s favourite authors.

Millions of people enjoy reading her books, or watching her stories as films or on television. This is Keira Knightley. She plays Elizabeth Bennet in the 2006 film of Pride and Prejudice, a famous novel by Jane Austen.

And this is Anne Hathaway. In 2007 she played Jane Austen in a film called Becoming Jane.

Jane Austen was born in Hampshire in the south of England in 1775. Her father was a vicar.

Jane had six brothers and one sister, and she started writing while she was still a teenager.

In 1801, her father decided to move the family to Bath. In the nineteenth century, Bath was a large city and very fashionable, but Jane wasn’t happy there. It was difficult for her to write.

In 1805, her father died. Jane, her mother and her sister Cassandra returned to the country. Jane’s brother Edward had a large house at Chawton. There was a small house in the same village for his mother and sisters, and their friend, Martha Lloyd.

Jane was happy in the house in Chawton. She started to write again. Her day started with piano practice before breakfast. After breakfast, she wrote, probably at this table and probably in this room because the light was good. After lunch the four women walked or worked in the garden.
Another brother, Henry, helped Jane to publish her novels: Sense and Sensibility in 1811, Pride and Prejudice in 1813, Mansfield Park in 1814 and Emma in 1815. In this period, many women writers preferred not to use their names on their books. The name of the author on Jane’s books at that time was ‘a lady’.

In 1816, Jane was ill. But she continued to write, and she finished her fifth novel, Persuasion.

She and her sister Cassandra moved to Winchester, a large town with a hospital. Jane died here on the eighteenth of July 1817 at the age of forty-two. Her tomb is in Winchester Cathedral.

Today, nearly two hundred years after her death, more people than ever enjoy reading her novels. And Jane Austen’s House Museum at Chawton has 40,000 visitors a year.

FILM 2 King Arthur

This is Glastonbury in the south-west of England. Glastonbury is an important part of a famous British legend... the legend of King Arthur. Many people believe that King Arthur died at Glastonbury. The legend says that Arthur was a great king. We think he lived in the 5th or 6th century.

A medieval writer, Geoffrey of Monmouth, first wrote the history of King Arthur in the 12th century. Today, after 900 years, the legend is still alive.
Other places in the south-west of England have connections to the King Arthur legend. This is Stonehenge, a circle of giant stones, 50 kilometres from Glastonbury. In one story, Merlin the magician brought these stones from Ireland.
Arthur’s parents... the king and queen... gave their baby son to Merlin because England was very dangerous.

Arthur didn’t know that he was the son of the king. But when he was fifteen, he pulled a magic sword out of a stone. The people knew then that he was their true king.

In the legend King Arthur protected England with the help of his Knights of the Round Table. They sat at a round table to show that they were all important. This isn’t the real round table. It’s a reproduction in Winchester Castle.

King Arthur’s home was Camelot. Some people believe that Camelot was here at Cadbury Castle near Glastonbury.

After Arthur’s final great battle, a boat took him to the Isle of Avalon to die. People think that Glastonbury was the Isle of Avalon because a long time ago this hill was an island with water all round it.

In 1190 some monks found a body here at Glastonbury Abbey. They thought that it was King Arthur. Are these stories true? No one knows, but visitors to the south-west of England are still fascinated by the legend of King Arthur. And some people believe that Arthur is not dead, but sleeping. He is waiting for the time when England needs a hero again.

FILM 3 William Shakespeare

William Shakespeare is a very famous English writer. He wrote 38 plays and 154 sonnets, or short poems. He was also an actor.

But we don’t know a lot about Shakespeare’s life. We know he was born on the 23rd of April in 1564 in this house in Stratford-upon-Avon, in the centre of England.

Shakespeare’s father made gloves. He was an important man in the town, and the family had a comfortable life. Shakespeare married Ann Hathaway in 1582, and they had three children.

Sometime between 1586 and 1592 Shakespeare left Stratford and moved to London. His family stayed in Stratford. Shakespeare became an actor and he also wrote plays. He joined an acting company. They performed his plays at the Globe Theatre, south of the River Thames. Shakespeare and his men became very famous. Their plays were popular with all kinds of people, including Queen Elizabeth the First.

In Shakespeare’s time, theatres were round, with an open roof. People with cheap tickets stood in the middle in the open to watch the play. People with expensive tickets sat at the sides under the cover. The original Globe Theatre burnt down in 1613. This is a modern reproduction of the theatre in London. This new theatre was built in 1999. From May to September each year, tourists can stand and watch plays just like people in Shakespeare’s time.

They can visit an exhibition and see costumes and objects used in the plays. The exhibition also shows how people first printed Shakespeare’s plays.
Shakespeare left London around 1613. He came back home to Stratford and bought a large house called New Place. He died there in 1616 on his birthday.

Thousands of visitors come to Stratford every year. They visit the houses where Shakespeare and his family lived. Stratford also has three large theatres where visitors can see Shakespeare’s plays. This is the home of the Royal Shakespeare Company, or the RSC. People study and perform Shakespeare’s plays all over the world and in many different languages.

On 27th December 1831, Charles Darwin left from Plymouth in England, on a ship called HMS Beagle. The ship sailed across the Atlantic Ocean to South America. They stopped in many places, including the tropical rainforest in Brazil, and Darwin studied many animals and plants. In 1835, the ship arrived at the Galapagos Islands. They stayed for several months. There were a lot of animals on the islands, and Darwin studied the birds. Then the ship went to Australia, and Darwin saw kangaroos, and met aborigines. His journey continued around the world, including a visit to South Africa. He collected many samples and sent them to the university in Cambridge. Darwin’s trip lasted for 5 years, and he returned to England in 1836.

FILM 4 Charles Darwin

This is the Natural History museum in London – one of the most popular museums in the United Kingdom.

The home of the museum is a beautiful building in an area of London called South Kensington. When you look at the building, you can see nature everywhere. Both outside and inside the building there are statues of animals and paintings of plants.

The museum first opened in 1881, and today over three million people visit it every year. Inside the museum visitors can see examples of animals from all around the world – from skeletons of some of the oldest sea creatures to models of the biggest animal on earth – the Blue Whale.

When visitors arrive in the Great Hall of the museum, they can see the skeleton of a dinosaur – and a statue of one of the most important British scientists in history – Charles Darwin, famous for his theory of evolution.

Charles Darwin was born on the 12th of February 1809 in Shropshire in the central part of England. His father was a doctor. Charles wasn’t a good student at school. He thought that nature was more interesting than school work.

When he was 16 years old, his father sent him to Edinburgh in Scotland to study medicine. But Charles hated it. He didn’t want to be a doctor and he left after two years.
Darwin went to Cambridge University to study theology instead. But studying still wasn’t as interesting as collecting insects and looking at plants.

This is HMS Beagle – a Royal Navy survey ship. On the 27th of December 1831 Darwin left England on The Beagle. He travelled around the world collecting plants and animals for research. The trip changed his life.

The voyage took five years and Darwin visited many different countries, from South America to South Africa and Australia.

On this trip Darwin began to think about how animals and plants can change to be more successful in their environment – the idea of evolution.

He brought back thousands of specimens from his trip – you can see some of these specimens at the Natural History museum today. Darwin wrote books about his trip and about the animals and plants that he saw.

In 1839 Darwin married his cousin Emma and the couple had ten children. They moved to a family home called Down House. Darwin continued his research and writing.

Finally, in 1859, Darwin published his most famous book about evolution, On the Origin of Species. It was a very important book.

Darwin continued to write and research for the rest of his life. When he died in 1882 at the age of 73, he was the most famous scientist in England. Darwin’s tomb is in Westminster Abbey in London.

In 2009, two hundred years after Darwin’s birth – the Natural History Museum opened the Darwin Centre to celebrate his work and continue his research. In this amazing building, called the Cocoon, the museum keeps over 20 million plant and insect specimens. The Cocoon has got eight floors. Visitors can walk through the Cocoon and learn about how scientists collect and research plants and animals. And they can even see the scientists working in their laboratories. The research that these scientists do today is just as important as Darwin’s work was two hundred years ago. Their work helps us to understand more about our world, and teaches us how important it is to protect the Earth for future generations.

FILM 5 Beatrix Potter

The Tale of Peter Rabbit is one of the most famous children’s stories in English. Beatrix Potter wrote the story of Peter Rabbit and painted all the illustrations as well.

Every year visitors from around the world come to the beautiful Lake District in the north of England to see Beatrix Potter’s home and learn more about her life.

Beatrix Potter was born in London on the 28th of July 1866. Her parents were rich and she had her own teacher at home. She was quite lonely, but she had lots of pets. She was a good artist. She loved drawing animals and flowers.

Every year Beatrix Potter and her family went on long summer holidays to the countryside. They sometimes stayed at Wray Castle in the Lake District. The castle was near Lake Windermere. Lake Windermere is the biggest lake in England. It’s over 16 kilometres long. It’s still a great place for a holiday. You can go across the lake by boat or go on a ferry.

Beatrix Potter loved the Lake District. She explored and painted the beautiful scenery, the animals, plants and flowers. And in 1902 she published her first book for children, The Tale of Peter Rabbit. It was very popular.

In 1905 Beatrix Potter bought Hill Top – a little farm near Lake Windermere. She drew lots of the animals that lived around the farm and she wrote twenty-two more stories about them with all the illustrations. She wrote other books as well.

Beatrix Potter sold millions of books and became very rich. She bought 15 farms across the Lake District. She loved farming and she had lots of Herdwick sheep on her farms. These sheep are black when they are born, but they become white when they get older. These were Beatrix Potter’s favourite kind of animal.

Beatrix Potter died in 1943, but today her books are still very popular. Miss Potter is a film about her life. The American actress, Renée Zellweger played Beatrix Potter.
The house in the film isn’t Hill Top. That was too small for the film. It was Yew Tree farm. – one of Beatrix Potter’s other farms. Today visitors can visit Hill Top and the new World of Beatrix Potter attraction in the town of Bowness on Windermere. They can buy her books and lots of other things at Peter Rabbit and Friends shops. Or they can just come explore the beautiful lakes and mountains of the Lake District that Beatrix Potter loved.
